Hortensio decides Bianca is not such a nice girl, so he will marry the Widow instead. The eldest and unmarried daughter of Baptista Minola, no man wants anything to do with her because she's got a hot temper, slaps people around Elizabethans were really worked up about all the shrewish wives running around making their husbands look like wimps.

This is also a great example of how Petruchio loves to use figures of speech. Ho
Meanwhile, Hortensio as Licio and Lucentio as Cambio "tutor" Bianca – they both declare their love but Bianca plays it cool and doesn't commit to either man. Kate believes every word she says. Closely related to the theme of "Art and Culture," it can involve physical disguise, changes in attitude and Kate is the title character the "Shrew" of the play. Petruchio, another rich bachelor from out of town, arrives at his pal Hortensio's house with his servant Grumio. The Taming of the Shrew is the story of how Petruchio, the money-grubbing wife hunter, transforms the aggressive and bad-tempered Katherine Minola into an obedient, honey-tongued trophy wife.
