Poets' Corner - Sam Walter Foss - Selected Works

The House By The Side Of The Road is one of my fathers favorite poems. Every time i hear it is make me think for kinder gentler times.

The Most Misread Poem in America

Let me live in a house by the side of the road, Where the race of men go by; The men who are good and the men who are bad, As good and as bad as I.

Smartly attired, countenance smiling, form upright, death under the breast-bones, hell under the skull-bones. Where is he that undoes stratagems and envelopes for you and me? A cultural offering may be simple or complex, cooked or raw, but its audience nearly always knows what kind of dish is being served.
