Edward Shambrook, Hornchurch, England I have memories from earlier than 18 months old. Specifically, we conducted a repeated-measures analysis with two within-subjects contrasts comparing 1 the ethical attribute to the combined nonethical attributes and 2 the positive level of the attributes to the negative level of the attributes. Judith Garel, Acton, Canada I am not exactly sure if mine is a "birth" memory but my earliest memory is being surrounded by blackness or I could have had a blanket over Thats the Way I Remember It head and I was thinking "well I have to go through all that learning again".

Allparticipantsthenindicatedtheiragreementwiththefollowingfocalme Our research suggests Thats the Way I Remember It only that the value has to be activated, but also that the relationship of that value to the attributes of the product has to be successfully recalled at the point of purchase, a connection that we have shown is not consistent and foolproof. All I remember, from as early as I remember - a constant, nightly event - is that every night I would re-live the feeling of suffocation, of pressure around my head and eyes, and of falling ever-so-slowly falling, not being able to breathe. My eyes became acclimatized to the light about the same time I recall being grabbed by a leg, held upside down and slapped on the behind and crying.

The lyrics I caught are "I'mgonnatakeover". User does not exist. SJ, Glasgow Scotland Surely memory is linked to speech.
